Fear, Anxiety and Immigration in the Contemporary United States (A Meeting of Inspired Minds)

As the U.S. has been dramatically transformed by massive immigration the past half century, widespread fears and anxieties have emerged – that immigrants will have trouble fitting in, will challenge or undermine core cultural beliefs and spell the end of dominance of advantaged groups. In this discussion, Nancy Foner (Professor of Sociology) will focus on several common fears, anxieties on unauthorized immigrants, crime, language, religion and the trials of racial change. She will be joined in conversation by Manfred Berg (University of Heidelberg) specialists in the history of the Civil Rights movement, race relations and German/American history.

This program is free of costs.

Contact DAZ or Ed Wilson (0175-5571560) for more information.
